

3. How the Sun was Rescued

responsibility

Warm-up

The Arctic is an area located at the northern-most part of the Earth. It is a very cold region.

Which animals can be found in the Arctic region? Take help from your teacher and find this information using the Internet.

Once upon a time, some evil spirits stole the Sun from the sky. All the animals decided to call a grand meeting to get back the Sun.

The wise old raven said, "My friends, how much longer must we live in darkness? I have heard that close to our land, in a great cavern, live the evil spirits who have stolen the Sun. They keep it in a white stone pot. We must get back the Sun. I advise you to send the biggest and strongest among us, the big polar bear, to fetch the Sun."

"The bear, the bear!" cried all the animals.

"Oh, no, no, no!" cried the owl. "As soon as he finds a bit of food, he'll forget all about his job."

With that they all had to agree. The raven spoke again, "Then let's send the wolf. After the bear, he is the strongest and he is much faster."

"Fiddlesticks!" snapped the owl. "That wolf is greedy and will stop at the first deer he sees and gobble it up. He'll forget all about rescuing the Sun."

Hearing the owl's words, the animals had to agree.

Just then, the tiny mouse raised her squeaky voice, "We should send the hare. He's the best runner amongst us. He'll fetch the Sun back for us."

Once more, the birds and beasts cried out, "The hare, the hare, the hare!"

cried	spoke loudly with feeling	gobble	eat something very quickly
fiddlesticks	nonsense	rescuing	saving
snapped	said something suddenly in an angry way	squeaky	making a very high sound

So, the hare was chosen. He hopped and skipped for many days across the land. One day, he saw rays of light coming from inside the Earth, through a narrow crack.

When he put his eye to the crack, he was able to see a white stone pot. The pot was shiny and smooth. A ball of fire was burning inside it.

"That must be the Sun," thought the hare.

skipped

moved lightly and quickly, making a small jump after each step snatched

took hold of something suddenly and roughly

spring

move quickly and suddenly towards a particular place

The brave little hare squeezed through the crack and hopped over to where the ball of fire lay. He snatched it up from the stone pot and moved fast to spring up through the crack.

Then the little hare ran as fast as his legs would carry him. But it was not long before the evil spirits caught up with him.

Just as they were about to grab him, he gave the ball of fire a hard kick with his hind legs, breaking it in two—one part small, the other big. With a second kick, he sent the smaller part flying high into the air until it reached the heavens. And there it became the Moon.

He then kicked the bigger part even higher, and it remained in the sky as the Sun. The Earth became bright once again!

The evil spirits were blinded by the light and hurried back to the cavern, never to appear on Earth again. And all the animals praised the brave little hare who had rescued the Sun.

helpfulness

(value-based question)

The polar bear and wolf were not sent to carry out the task. The hare was sent instead. Highlight at least three qualities that helped the hare to complete the task.

Using Grammar

(adjectives of quality)

Words which tell us more about someone or something (a noun) are called adjectives. They are also called describing words.

The wolf is a greedy animal.

The word greedy tells us what kind of an animal the wolf is. This is an adjective of quality.

3 A. Circle the adjectives in these sentences. Make sentences with the adjectives that you circle. Check your answers with your teacher.

1. The wise raven offered help.
2. The troubled animals were worried.
3. The tiny mouse said the hare must be sent.
4. The hare saw the large cavern and dared to rescue the Sun.
5. The bright Sun lit up the sky.

Some adjectives tell us how many or how much there is of a noun.
These are adjectives of quantity.

- There were ten animals at the grand meeting.
- The animals didn't have much food.

B. Underline the adjectives of quantity and circle the adjectives of quality. (Some sentences may have two adjectives of quantity.)

1. There lived twenty evil spirits in the jungle.
2. They hid many things in two large caverns.
3. Three animals were chosen to rescue the Sun.
4. There was a lot of noise at the two meetings since every animal wanted to say something.
5. There was one white pot in which the Sun was hidden.

(degrees of comparison)

Read these three sentences.

- The hare was a fast runner.
- The hare was faster than the wolf and the bear.
- The hare was the fastest of all the animals in the forest.

In the first sentence, we do not compare the hare with any other animal.
He was fast.

In the second sentence, we compare the hare with the wolf and the bear.
He was faster than the others.

In the third sentence, we compare the hare with all the animals in the jungle.
He was the fastest of them all.

We say that fast is the positive degree, faster is the comparative degree and fastest is the superlative degree.

Note how the spelling changes for some adjectives.

greedy – greedier – greediest

Some words like intelligent take more or most in the comparative and superlative degrees.

intelligent – more intelligent – most intelligent

- C. Give the right degrees of comparison for these words. Discuss your answers with your teacher.

	Positive	Comparative	Superlative
1.	dark
2.		bigger
3.	brave		bravest
4.		happier
5.			most beautiful
6.		more difficult

Using Words

(cardinal and ordinal numbers)

A cardinal number is a number that says how many of something there is/are. It answers the question 'how many'.

- one
- two
- three
- four
- five

An ordinal number tells us the position of something on a list.

- first
- second
- third
- fourth
- fifth

- A. Given below is the picture of a mouse family. Work in pairs and look at the picture to complete these sentences with cardinal or ordinal numbers.

- There are _____ mice in the picture.
- The _____ mouse is wearing a hat.

Speaking

(asking for help)

In this story, the animals asked the hare to help them. Here are some ways in which you can ask for help.

- Can you help me...?
- Will you help me...?
- Would you mind...?
- Would you help me...?
- Could you help me...?
- Could you please...?

Imagine you have missed school one day and need your partner's help to find out how to solve a sum that was taught when you were absent.

Take turns to role play this situation.

Writing

(describing an object)

In this story, the pot was described in detail. It was smooth, white and shiny. It was made of stone. A ball of fire was burning in it.

Now choose a household object to write about. Draw a large star. Draw your object in the centre and write the name of the object. Write a few words on each point of the star to describe the object. Take the help of the picture given here.

Punctuation

(integrated punctuation)

This is a note written by all the animals of the jungle to thank the hare. They were so excited that they forgot to put in any punctuation marks.

Rewrite the note with the right punctuation. You will need to put capital letters, full stops, commas and exclamation marks. Show your answers to your teacher and discuss the correct answers.

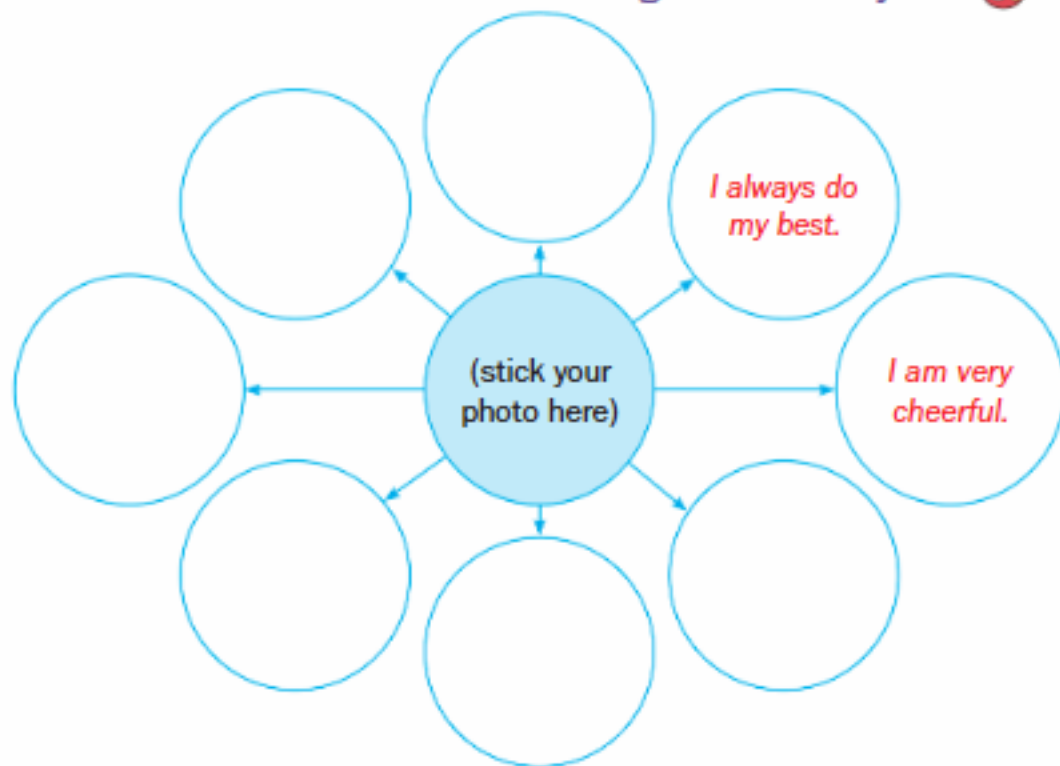

all the animals in the jungle would like to thank you for rescuing the sun it was a very difficult thing for you to do but you were so brave and strong we now have warmth light and joy in our lives because of you thank you for all your help.

Life Skills Activity

(self-awareness)

We read about the various qualities the animals in this story had. Now think about your own qualities and talents.

A. Fill the bubbles below with interesting facts about 'you'.

B. Use these facts to make a poster about yourself. Give it a title. Then put it up in your classroom for others to know you better.   C
