Narrator: Miss Maya taught the youngest children in Lajpat Lane School. There were about twenty children in her class and one of them was a boy called Raja. Now Raja was particular about his trousers and always had pockets in them. This was to keep things in, of course. Raja was a collector. He collected anything at all that was interesting and fitted into his trouser pockets.

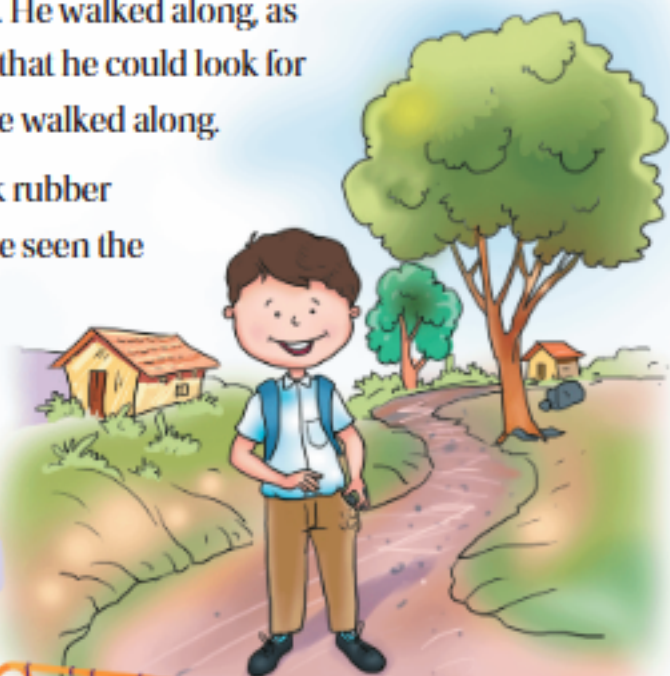

One morning, Raja set out for school. He walked along, as he usually did, with his head bent so that he could look for interesting things on the ground as he walked along.

Raja (to himself): Here's a strong, thick rubber band! I know how it came here. I have seen the postwoman slip it off her bundle of letters and drop it on the path.

Narrator: He picked it up and put it in his pocket.

paid close attention to pants

Raja: What a flat, round pebble! It is lovely to hold—cold and smooth.

Narrator: Raja put it in his other pocket. He walked a little further, still looking.

Raja: That's a shiny, silver safety pin. I'll put it in my pocket with the rubber band. And here's a matchbox. It is quite clean and new.

Narrator: Raja opened it and sniffed. It smelt just like matches—a funny smell that made his nose wrinkle up. He was very pleased with the empty matchbox and put it into the pocket with the rubber band and the safety pin.

Raja: That's a long piece of green string near the hedge.

Narrator: He picked it up and put it in the pocket with the smooth, cool pebble.

Now he was nearly at the school gate. He began to jog along, kicking a tiny broken piece of red brick in front of him.

Raja: I suppose this might come in useful too.

Narrator: So he picked it up and put it into his pocket with the rubber band and the safety pin and the matchbox. He ran into the playground feeling very cheerful.

Now you will hardly believe it, but every single thing in Raja's pockets came in useful that day in school. When Raja went into the classroom, the first person he saw was Miss Maya, watering the plants in their pots.

pebble small, smooth, round stone sniffed smelt wrinkle up make the skin form into folds hedge a boundary formed by closely growing shrubs or bushes jog run at a slow, regular speed, especially as a form of exercise

Miss Maya: These plants are getting rather tall, poor things. We'll have to tie them to a stick so that they don't bend right over.

Raja: You can tie them with my string.

Miss Maya: Just the thing. Thanks!

Narrator: Miss Maya used the string to tie the plants to a stick. After that, Lina's skirt strap came loose.

Miss Maya: We'll mend it somehow.

Raja: You can pin it together with my safety pin.

Miss Maya: Just the thing.

Narrator: Miss Maya pinned Lina's skirt strap to the skirt with Raja's shiny, safety pin. Then Mary felt a bit sick. She said she felt too hot and had a headache.

Miss Maya: Sit down, Mary, and rest your head on the table. You'll feel better soon.

Raja: You can put my nice, smooth pebble next to your head, if you like.

Miss Maya: Just the thing.

Narrator: Mary thought that was a good idea too. She held the cool flat pebble next to her hot forehead. It cheered her up a lot. During playtime Ali's tooth came out.

Miss Maya: Take it home to show your mother.

Ali: I might lose it.

Raja: You can put it in my matchbox, if you like.

Miss Maya: Just the thing.

↑ Narrator: Ali put his little white baby tooth into Raja's clean matchbox. Afterwards, they went into the playground. Miss Maya showed them how to play hopscotch on the pavement.

Miss Maya: First, you have to write numbers on the pavement in the squares. Bother! I've not brought any chalk outside with me. Could you go inside and get me a piece, Raja?

Raja: You can use my bit of red brick, if you like.

Miss Maya: Just the thing. I'll write the numbers in red.

Narrator: I wonder if you know what Raja had left in his pocket now? Everyone came indoors after that. Today was Raja's turn for painting. When it was finished, Miss Maya held it up for everyone to see. Raja showed them his picture of Batman and Robin in the Batmobile. Everyone thought it was a great picture. Miss Maya rolled it up carefully and gave it to Raja to carry home. Raja took the strong, thick rubber band out of his pocket. Miss Maya helped him put it round his lovely picture.
