

Chapter 4: Adjective

Definition

An adjective is a word that describes or modifies a noun or a pronoun. It tells us more about the quality, quantity, number, or size of a noun. Adjectives help make sentences clearer and more meaningful.

Types of Adjectives and Usage

Adjective of Quality

An adjective of quality describes the kind or nature of a person, place, or thing. It answers the question 'What kind?' and helps us understand the nature of the noun. Such adjectives are commonly used in descriptive writing and everyday speech. They add detail and depth to sentences by expressing feelings or characteristics. These adjectives make writing more vivid and interesting. They are often placed before the noun they describe. Sometimes, they can also come after linking verbs.

Examples: Examples: good, brave, honest, beautiful

Adjective of Quantity

An adjective of quantity tells us how much of something is meant. It is used mainly with uncountable nouns and answers the question 'How much?'. These adjectives give a clear idea of amount without exact numbers. They are very common in daily communication and instructions. Such adjectives help avoid confusion while speaking or writing. They usually appear before the noun. They are not used with plural countable nouns.

Examples: Examples: some, much, little, enough

Adjective of Number

An adjective of number tells us how many persons or things are meant. It answers the question 'How many?' or 'In what order?'. These adjectives are used with countable nouns. They help in expressing exact numbers or order clearly. They are important in formal writing and instructions. These adjectives usually come before the noun. They include both cardinal and ordinal numbers.

Examples: Examples: one, two, first, second, several

Demonstrative Adjective

A demonstrative adjective points out a specific noun. It answers the question 'Which one?'. These adjectives are used to show nearness or distance. They always come before a noun and never stand alone. They help avoid repetition in sentences. Their form changes according to number. They are commonly used in spoken English.

Examples: Examples: this, that, these, those

Possessive Adjective

A possessive adjective shows ownership or possession. It tells us to whom something belongs. These adjectives are always followed by a noun. They agree with the possessor, not with the thing possessed. They help make relationships clear in sentences. They are often confused with possessive pronouns. They are used very frequently in daily speech.

Examples: Examples: my, your, his, her, our, their
